

Step 1

Know about the risk of a tsunami

Check your position on the detailed map (P65~74)

※Please check not only your house, but the position of your workplace, school and relatives' houses.

Are each of those places evacuation target areas?

※Evacuation target area: area that will require evacuation in the case of a tsunami, as designated by the City in response to definition at a workshop held by residents etc. based on estimations of tsunami flooding published by Aichi Prefecture. In consideration of ensuring safety and smooth evacuation, the potential flood area has been specified as larger than estimations.

If you feel strong shaking, or a weaker earthquake that continues for a longer time, or a warning or evacuation notice is issued, please evacuate immediately.

Evacuation destination

Ensure you evacuate to as safe a place as possible with the time and strength you have available prior to the tsunami arriving.

List a number of places you can evacuate to on foot.

*Aim at the very least to leave the evacuation target area

Step 2

Step 2

How to determine which evacuation site to use and ensure a safe evacuation route

Check the evacuation destination you thought of in Step 1

Check the route to your evacuation destination

Consider your multiple evacuation routes in reference to the Tsunami Evacuation Plan.

- Aim for a high, safe place as quickly as you can.
- Evacuate using the shortest possible route to the evacuation destination point that you can reach most safely outside of the evacuation target area.
- Once you are outside of the evacuation target area, if you are able, head for a temporary tsunami evacuation location.
- Do not move towards the tsunami flood area.
- Do not evacuate along a river.
- Where possible, evacuate on foot.

Check all items!

List several places to which you can escape.

	(Time required for evacuation*)
Temporary tsunami evacuation location	(Minutes)
Evacuation destination point	(Minutes)
Emergency evacuation locations	(Minutes)

*The time required is shown to the bottom right of the detailed map.
